DARYN KAGAN: Colorful autumn leaves and crisp cool air add to a great get away.

If you're in the mood to enjoy the fall foliage, we have some advice about where to go, and we're not just talking about New England.

Joining us in New York with advice on finding the best autumn leaves is Nilou Motamed of Travel + Leisure Magazine. Let's start in Aspen.

NILOU MOTAMED: The thing about this weather is it just makes people want to put on their sweaters and go apple picking or go to the pumpkin patch, and this is what's great about Aspen.

You can go hiking and see these beautiful Aspen trees. They turn this amazing golden color.

One great place to see them is the Maroon Bells, which is a mountain peak, and you're seeing that right now, and the Maroon Lake.

And a great place to stay in Aspen is Little Nell, and what they're really known for is their service.

They're a Relais & Chateaux property, and their concierge will call you ahead of time and ask you do you want to set up bike riding trips, do you want to set up hiking tours, would you like us to get some horses for you to go horseback riding, so once you get there you can hit the ground running and see as much of the beautiful scenery as possible.
